BEGIN RECRUITING AUXILIARY POLICE FORCE IN COUNTY

Bucks County Council of Defense Asks for Volunteers

THREE AREAS FORMED

Outlines What Duties Will Be Required of Those Serving

The Bucks County Council of Defense announces that recruiting of the auxiliary police for service within Bucks County, in case of an emergency, has begun.

For the purposes of organization the county has been divided into three Areas—Upper, Middle and Lower, and these in turn into sixteen zones, embracing a total of fifty-four districts. Eventually a representative in each of these districts will be authorized to sign up recruits. For the present, recruiting is being done through the area chiefs and such zone chiefs as have been appointed.

The duties of the emergency police will include patrol of roads, guarding of bridges, public utilities, power and light installations, water works, lines of communication, transportation, etc., together with such other duties as may be necessary in the event of disturbed conditions and particularly of an evacuation of civilians into the county from surrounding territory. The force will be directly in charge of existing police authorities, and the plan for it has been made in consultation with the State Motor Patrol, the Sheriff of the County, local police chiefs, representatives of the veterans organizations, retired army officers, and with the approval of the Commissioners of Bucks County.

It will operate, for purposes of preparation, in the form of units, distributed over the county in accordance with the probability of local needs and the convenience of the residence of recruits to the units to which they are assigned. It is expected that there will be a program of drill, adjusted to the off-hours of the men who enroll. In the event of an emergency, the entire force

GOOD WEATHER NEEDED FOR HARVESTING GRAIN

Rain of Several Days Most Unfavorable To Farm Crops; Harvest Imperative

RAIN BENEFITS BERRIES

A season of good weather is needed in order to harvest the grain throughout Bucks County, states county farm agent William F. Greenawalt, Doylestown, who points out the imperative necessity of harvesting the crop immediately.

The weather conditions of the past few days have been most unfavorable, and farmers have been delayed in the work.

Harvesting of the clover and timothy has been completed, and the first cutting of alfalfa has been stored. Because of the dry weather earlier in the season, the clover, timothy and first cutting of alfalfa were rather short, although the stand was quite good. The second cutting of alfalfa will take place in the near future, and the crop promises to be good.

Frequent rains and the hot weather have been in favor of the corn crop which also promises to be quite good. The potatoes have also been benefited by the rain and hot weather.

According to Mr. Greenawalt, the Japanese beetles are rather slow in making their appearance this season, but he said they may be expected in full force very soon. The Mexican bean beetles have been quite destructive this season.

Raspberries and blackberries also have been benefited by the rain, but too much moisture and hot weather, said Mr. Greenawalt, will be hard on them.

Prospects for large apple and peach yields are good, and the owners of apple orchards are ready to apply the last spray of the season. This is for the codling moth, the curculio, late infestation of the scab and what is known as sooty blotch. Peach growers at present are spraying their trees to prevent the fruit from attack by the Japanese beetles.

"Peeping Tom" Fined By Justice of Peace Lynn

A "Peeping Tom" was fined $10 and costs, last night, after a hearing before Justice of Peace Edward Lynn, in which the one accused pleaded guilty to the charge.

William Miles, 28, Greenlawn Park, was taken into custody by the police, Wednesday night, after residents of the Sixth Ward had apprehended him in the vicinity of his residence.

Miles was accused of "peeping" into windows of residences in the vicinity of McKinley street. Wednesday night he was allegedly seen, standing in the shadows of trees. "Then he ran up over the railroad bank," said one of the witnesses.

Three witnesses appeared at the hearing last night and Miles admitted what they stated was true. He also made a statement to Chief of Police Linford J. Jones, previous to the hearing, according to Chief Jones.

Miles was given the privilege of either paying the fine or serving 30 days in jail. He left his gold wrist watch as security until he pays his fine.

DEFENSE TRAINING IS OUTLINED FOR YOUTH

Out-of-School Farm Lads Are Considered by Officials of Doylestown Area

FARM SCHOOL TO AID

DOYLESTOWN, July 11—A program of defense training for out-of-school farm youth in the Doylestown area is being outlined, with National Farm School officials and Doylestown Township school board co-operating.

The program is now being formed here. Such training has been inaugurated for farm youth in various sections of Pennsylvania during the past few months.

In speaking of the activity, H. B. Allen, president of the Farm School, said:

"With this objective in mind, four defense courses, known as the 'A' Series,' were developed by the Office of Education in Washington. A-1 deals with the operation, care, and repair of farm tractors, trucks, and automobiles. A-2 covers instruction in metal work, including welding, tempering, drilling, and various types of machinery repair. A-3 is a course in wood work. A-4 deals with practical problems of elementary electricity.

"Utilizing the unusually extensive shop facilities of The National Farm School, it is anticipated that one or more of the above units will be provided for farm boys of Doylestown township and surrounding areas not already served by defense courses of this nature. Each of the courses operates for a minimum of eight weeks on the basis of five sessions a week, with three hours devoted to a single session. To accommodate the needs of farm boys, these courses are usually given in the evenings from seven to 10 o'clock. Young men from rural areas between the ages of 17 and 25 who are interested in this type of training should get in touch with Dr. Adolf Berg, secretary of the Doylestown Township Board of Education, Doylestown, or write directly to The National Farm School, Farm School, P. O. Pa. Granges and other farm organizations are urged to call this matter to the attention of their younger members."

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

That the world is no worse today than it was a generation ago as regards conduct of young people, and their attitude toward others, was the consensus of opinion of a group of eight young folks participating in a program of Richland Grange this week.

Questions in this phase of the program were asked by Ely R. Fretz.

The young folks gave it as their opinion that it pays to be honest, that the young people are not "going to the dogs," and that the young folks are becoming what the older generation causes them to become by their examples.

David Platt, a graduate of the class of 1923 at National Farm School, Doylestown, now connected with the largest bulb concern in the United States, has been elected president of the National Farm School Alumni Association.

With a membership of 950, the alumni association of this school is planning to take a more active part in the development of Farm School. Graduates from eight states, including Florida and Arkansas, attended the reunion this year. The class of 1929 was represented by 15 members.

Other officers elected include the following: Vice-presidents, Sidney Brunwasser, class of 1920, Pittsburgh; H. Rogin, New York City, class of 1933; Kenneth Mayer, Philadelphia, class of 1924; Ben Gartner, Philadelphia, and Archie Toffler, Atlantic City; secretary-treasurer, Samuel B. Samuels, re-elected for the 15th consecutive year.

A Springtown farmer, Victor Gehman, was fined $5 and costs of prosecution this week, when given a hearing before justice of the peace W. Carl Hobensack, at Doylestown.

The charge lodged against Gehman was cruelty to dumb animals.

Complaints were received about the condition of the stables at the Springfield township farm by Charles E. Pyle, of Philadelphia, of the Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and also by the Bucks County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

According to an investigation, made by officials of the Philadelphia and Bucks County S. P. C. A., the stables at the Gehman farm were in such an unsanitary condition that the animals were compelled to assume unnatural positions while standing in their stalls. One mule had to be shot and Gehman's attention was called to the condition of other animals.

Justice of the Peace Hobensack gave the defendant a certain length of time to improve the interior of his stables.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Step By Step

Washington, July 10. WHEN, for weeks following his last radio talk—May 28—Mr. Roosevelt failed to take action commensurate with his words, a good deal of dissatisfaction was voiced by the more ardent advocates of his foreign policy. And when, the day after Mr. Knox's speech on June 30, the President failed to indorse publicly the view of his Secretary of the Navy that the time had come for us to drive the German submarines from the sea, there was disappointment easy to understand.

—O—

IT is significant that, to a large extent, the occupation of Iceland has removed this dissatisfaction and dissolved the disappointment. There are, of course, many who are anxious to have the President plunge immediately ahead with the seizure of Martinique, the Cape Verde Islands and other strategic points from which, theoretically, attack could be made on us. Also, without delay, they want him to direct full naval participation in the Battle of the Atlantic. There are strong arguments for this course, but his Iceland action has resulted in a clearer comprehension of the difficulties of the President's position and an increased belief in the wisdom of his approach.

—O—

IN the first place, it can be accepted that Mr. Knox, Mr. Hull and other first-rank Administration men have spoken with Mr. Roosevelt's full approval. The way they talk and feel is the way he talks and feels. For example, no one more fully than Mr. Roosevelt knows the truth of Mr. Knox's statement that in the first five months of this year the Germans have sunk 2,198,000 tons of British shipping; that this is at the annual rate of 5,275,000; that three ships are being sunk for

NATIONAL DEFENSE THEME OF THE ELKS' CONVENTION

Bristol Lodge Will Support Theme Adopted by The National Group

MEET IN PHILADELPHIA

Bristol Lodge, No. 970, of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks will give full support to the theme to which the coming National Convention will be dedicated . . . national defense. William G. Wiehser, exalted ruler, declared last night, in referring to the gathering of some 50,000 members and delegates of the order who will meet in Philadelphia in national convention the week of July 13th.

"Every member of our lodge considers, as does our Grand Exalted Ruler, Joseph G. Buch, that there is no more timely nor patriotic objective to which we can devote our efforts than national defense. In this way we will help to make America safe against threat of foreign aggression," Mr. Wiehser said. "Through the able leadership of our Grand Exalted Ruler we have enjoyed during the past year not only a phenomenal increase in membership, but also through his efforts and those of James R. Nicholson, chairman of the Elks' National Defense Commission we have seen increased accomplishment in patriotic endeavor."

He referred to a letter just received from Mr. Buch, wherein it was stated that the National Convention would continue the policy of the Order in pledging full support to every effort which would bring our armed forces, as well as our economic and manufacturing strength to the highest state of efficiency. "It is thus that the Order will help effectively to mobilize our manpower and resources, and to make our country a safer place in which to live," Mr. Buch declared.

Mr. Wiehser said that the coming gathering in the Quaker City will be one of the most vitally important in the history of the Order. "The patriotic spirit of the gathering, held in this time of national emergency and culminating a year of splendid work

RETROSPECTIVE CENSORSHIP

English newspapers, carrying sections of the debate in the House of Commons on the status of Rudolf Hess which are more detailed than the cabled dispatches, have reached this country. As usual, Prime Minister Churchill made a good defense of the government's position without being tricked into disclosing too much. As usual, too, he dug down into his bag of phrases and pulled out one worthy of a great deal of thought.

"Did the Prime Minister notice," asked Major Vyvyan Adams, Conservative, "that the Times described this creature Hess as an idealist?" "I do not think," replied Churchill, "that I can indulge in retrospective censorship of the press. There was great public interest in this matter. . . . The press, naturally, endeavor to satisfy the public desire for information by recording all kinds of details which come into their hands. It seems to me the whole episode has been entertaining as well as important."

Among Britain's many blessings in its dark days is a leadership which, even under the necessity for strict censorship of military information, remains keenly conscious of the importance of freedom of expression of opinion and the duty of the press to present the best reports that are available if they do not endanger the military effort. "Retrospective censorship," which Churchill has no time for, has not been uncommon in this country. It does not limit the freedom of the press, but it can be extremely irritating.

It is not conducive to the creation of the spirit of cooperation between the press and the agencies of the government.

STRATEGIC MATERIALS

The prediction made last summer by Army Air Corps experts that the production of military planes in this country would stagnate in July and August seems to have been well based. The cause is not in manufacturing the planes, but in obtaining raw materials for the parts. The shortage of aluminum and magnesium is mentioned. Lack of machine tools has slowed some plants.

The House Military Committee reports, following several weeks of investigation, that the shortage of strategic materials is due to "absence of a responsible head with authority and power" and to too much administration preoccupation in recent years with "social rather than national security."

The first reference is to the President's failure to give to Knudsen the power to make his orders effective, as Woodrow Wilson did in 1918 when he established a war industries board. The second is to tinkering with visionary social reforms at a time of national peril.

The Military Affairs Committee is made up of seventeen Democrats and eleven Republicans. It cannot be regarded as prejudiced against the administration. Its conclusions are based on evidence which it presented in the report and which is open to public inspection. While it has only spoken the criticism that is heard on all sides, it has spoken with more force and authority than any other person or group. It has clearly and directly placed its finger on the defense bottleneck.

If he saved the bent pin, a Hoosier boy who caught a 43-pound fish with a sewing thread should be able to prove his point.

every one the British and ourselves are building; that these sinkings include planes, guns, food and ammunition as well as ships; that at this rate—or anything like this rate—the inevitable end is victory for Hitler.

THAT'S what Mr. Knox said, and in that the President concurs. Like Mr. Knox, he would like to sweep the Germans from the sea. There is no doubt of that. That would be in accord with his own declarations, such as "We shall actively resist Hitler's every effort to gain control of the seas" and "The delivery of more needed supplies to Britain is imperative. This can be done; it must be done; it will be done." Well, then, why does he not do it? Why did he wait six weeks before taking the Iceland step? Why does he not now throw aside all hesitation and go wholeheartedly in for convoying? That's the logical thing to do. Why does he not do it?

TWO things stand in the way. One, the promises which Mr. Roosevelt made about keeping us out of war; the other, the sentiment of many citizens against going farther than we have gone. As to the promises, probably Mr. Roosevelt had to make some of them in order to be elected; and probably he had to make others in order to get through the lend-lease bill. Probably he made these promises sincerely, wanted to keep them, believed he could. Nonetheless, they hamper and embarrass him now, because to cling to them operates against the effectiveness of his policy and involves risks both to our ally and ourselves.

BECAUSE of these promises, because of this sentiment and because a President must always seem to have war forced on him rather than to desire it—because of these things, Mr. Roosevelt cannot go as fast nor as far as he has been urged or as he would like. It is pointed out that the first essential in traveling the road he has chosen is to have behind him a genuinely united country. Accordingly, he moves toward full participation step by step, waiting after each one for public sentiment to catch up before taking another. So far every move has been overwhelmingly approved. Everything he has done he has justified in the name of defense, and he has progressed with a caution that has given his opponents little real ammunition.

YET, he has moved pretty far. The closing of the German consulates was a sensational step, and the Iceland action was a stride—the biggest since passage of the lend-lease bill. Unquestionably, it takes us closer to war, though the President can—and does—insist that it was a defensive and not an offensive move. Its advantages to Britain are attested both by the exultation in England and the bitterness of the Axis comment. The chances of shooting and being shot at are enhanced. We are no longer merely the "Arsenal of Democracy." We are closer to being a fighting ally.

FROM press, people and Congress the commendation has been emphatic. Protest has been confined entirely to leaders of the isolation group, who have opposed every step from the start. Beyond doubt, the President has carried the country along with him. Obviously, his strategy is to take no step until he is certain of doing that. There are sure to be moves following the Iceland occupation. But it is not likely the next move will come quickly. If the President performs as he has been performing, he will wait for public opinion to solidify behind him; wait for some incident that will force us—or seem to force us—farther toward full participation.

THERE are sound grounds for contending that this Roosevelt slowness is not only wise but necessary; that it would be a fatal blunder to seem to be dragging the country into war; that there is no alternative to the step-by-step policy. All of which may be true, but those appalling figures of the submarine sinkings mean that there is great danger in delay. There is danger if the President waits to nurse public sentiment and there is danger if he does not. There is danger in whatever he decides, but up to date his strategy has met the approval of the people and been responsible for no disaster. How long the luck will hold, no one can tell.

PUPPET LOVE by Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr.

SYNOPSIS

In all his twenty-four years, Christopher Allen Bishop had stood in awe of his family name and all it represented—bluebloods and millions! But today, he had gotten fed up with the whole artificial set-up, given up his $25-a-week "job," sent a farewell note to his aristocratic mother, and started out on his own in a roadster he had won in a radio contest. On the road to adventure, he picks up Joe Kane, a hitch-hiker. Against Joe's better judgment, they stop at a questionable luncheon where Christopher's pocket is picked. The latter retrieves his wallet but a free-for-all ensues with Christopher and Joe the victors. The boys part company in Joe's home-town of Cressville but, before leaving, Joe gives Christopher a card advertising "Kamp Kosy Komfort" saying, "This is where I'll be. If you need a friend just yell for Joe." Driving along, the squealing strains of an organ came to Christopher. Could that be "The Blue Danube"? His ear for harmony outraged. Christopher goes in search of the "musician," and finds himself at a "Society Circus for the Benefit of Children's Hospital."

CHAPTER FOUR

The last place on earth he wanted to be was at a society circus. How many times had his mother dragged him unwillingly to such performances! Certainly he wasn't going of his own volition. He turned quickly, but he hadn't figured on the shepherdeses. Dianna in disguise, the whole bunch, they surged toward him in a chattering mass. "General admission, fifty cents . . . chance on a Pomeranian . . . the roulette begins in twenty minutes . . . candy, cigars, cigarettes . . ."

They might know him. There might be more publicity. He broke into a run. Two strides should have taken him out the drive, but somehow he'd made a wrong turn. He wasn't on the drive. He was between the privet hedge and a border of boxwood. But at least he was hidden. The boxwood rose high above his head.

Christopher stood still, hearing the murmur of voices, as the girls retreated. His forehead was damp and he was as breathless as though he'd run a mile. The next instance he nearly leaped from his hiding place with a start of surprise. From over his left shoulder, it seemed, came another voice peculiarly shrill, and another, artificially bass. The voices were fantastic enough, but what they were saying!

The Bass: "I've shown you all my castles, my horses and dogs, and money bags. Now will you marry me?"

The Soprano: "But who is that girl spinning around on her toes all the time?"

The Bass: "She will be your best friend. She is in the social whirl."

The Soprano: "But she's been going around like that for hours and has never gotten any place."

The Bass: "She isn't going any place. She has arrived."

The Soprano:—in shocked shrill tones: "And that's what I will do if I marry you?"

The Bass:—with great emphasis: "And very lucky you'll be to do it. If you go that fast in one spot all the time, everything is a rosy blur, and life looks nice because you can't see it."

The Soprano: "But I'm a woman, sir. Not a top. Begone!"

he had forgotten momentarily, suddenly bleated a bar, skipped a note and took another bar. The sound was directly in his right ear.

Very cautiously he parted the thick branches of the boxwood to stare at the side of a low slung black truck, a very shabby vehicle covered with tar paper and tin, which was parked close to the boxwood, and from which, indubitably, came the suffering strains of that organ.

Curiosity overcame even his fear of girls. So, not too boldly Bishop circled the boxwood. Then pulled up short at a burst of laughter—very young laughter. He was at the end of the boxwood, the end of the truck, and in the very first row of a small audience viewing a marionette show. Several dozen children and a few women were seated on folding chairs before the theatre.

Christopher slumped his tall frame into the first small chair that spinning doll in the red dress had a malicious grin that tormented Christopher's memory. She looked like someone he knew. . . . nor was that all. The whole thing reminded him of everybody he knew, except the little white-gowned doll. She had a charming winsomeness about her. As chairs were pushed back and the children moved away, the terrible music bleated "Over the Waves" . . .

Determinedly Christopher rose and inspected the little theatre. Over the stage was a well lettered sign Nicky's Marionettes. At the side, covered with tar paper, like the rest of the truck, was a long, narrow door with a small window.

Christopher rapped. A muffled voice from the interior asked who was there.

"It's about the music," Christopher explained politely. "I really think such a lovely lady deserves

She was all of five-feet-two and looked even smaller.

faced the open stage. From somewhere in the truck's innards emerged that squealing, puffing "music." And on the stage were three dolls—a girl in a white evening dress, a man in tails—the soprano and the bass! The third doll, a girl in a red sequined gown, was whirling madly at extreme right stage. The lady in the social whirl, of course. Christopher admitted it was clever.

The gentleman doll was making heroic appeals to the heroine in white, while the children shrieked and the music grunted. The heroine was refusing his offer of marriage with suitable marionette gestures.

At last she came down centre and made a bow, as the man dragged himself off tragically. She recited: "I've seen his castles with slippery floors

And glass for roof and walls and doors
I'd rather live in smaller places
Surrounded by gentle, kindly faces."

Another doll in rough hunter's suit appeared, the two embraced while the little dervish, run down, collapsed in a heap.

The children applauded loudly as the dolls made their bows. The better accompaniment."

The slide in the door flew back and, for a second, Christopher thought he confronted the doll herself. The same short-cut, black curly hair; blue eyes that slanted a bit under dark brows; an upturned nose and a firm, definitely lovely mouth. But the face was grime-streaked, the curls hung damply to the low forehead and the blue eyes blazed with annoyance.

"You wouldn't look so smooth either," she flared, "if you'd driven this thing a hundred miles this morning, changed a tire in a ditch and then uncoupled this trailer to give a show."

She stepped out as though to find more room for her anger. She was all of five-feet-two, and looked even smaller in slacks and polo shirt.

"But . . . but . . ." Christopher stammered, a hot flush mounting under his expensive year-round tan, "I had no idea it was you. . . . I mean . . . a girl . . . I meant the doll, you see."

"Oh, Imogene!" she laughed, and her smile, with a sudden, high in the cheek dimple, was staggering.

Retired Circus Clown Recounts Experiences

noon in the Elks' Home, when he spoke at length on how a circus operates, and gave detailed descriptions of his experiences in 14 different shows that took him to all parts of the country.
In conjunction with the program, Ernest Gamble presented several very appropriate circus songs. Members also presented a circus skit in which William Begley, Esq., assumed the role of ringmaster, appropriately attired in a ringmaster's costume. He recited the poem, "Madame Fid." Dr. Charles Sampsel then was presented by ring-master Begley. He was dressed as a trapeze performer, and his act was enthusiastically received.
The meeting next week will be a joint affair with the local Exchange Club, when both groups go to Bucks County Boy Scout Camp, Ockanickon, at Point Pleasant.

Faith Clarke's SHOPPING TIPS FOR BUDGETEERS

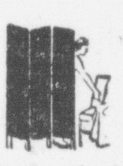

If you're bent upon economizing, summer is a magic time to shop. So many "little sales" not even advertised, but including unbe-lievable values. Go to town!

And you want him to discard that old bath-ing suit. Why, buy him a new one! Any husband or big son will appreciate the extra good, all-wool suits which Snellenburg's Sporting Goods Dept. (3rd fl.) is now selling at only $2.95. A man will like the cut, fit, zippered detachable top, and built-in support. Diagonal and other weaves add interest. Haven't seen such good looking water togs for males in a long while. Snappy belts. Knowing size, you can or-der by mail or phone if you like. Two-tone blue, blue and white, maroon and blue, brown and canary, etc. Surprise him!

Plants and flowers suffer from malnutrition as surely as do chil-dren. Here's a chance to help these garden or house-plant folks. Like ourselves, they can now be given new life and beauty by the modern vitamin treatment. Buy some of Snellenburg's "Plant Dinner" for them, from the 1st fl. Garden Dept. A 1/2 oz. pkg. costs 10c. There are 25c and 75c pkgs., and a 1 lb. pkg. priced at $1.75. Dissolve the "dinner" in water and apply with watering can. Simple? Also miraculous, no less! This is another gift any week-end hostess would appreciate. Try it out.

Get acquainted with folding screens. Hand-iest things imaginable! Grand for cottages or dividing home bed-rooms for company, hiding unsightly cor-ners, placing about an emergency davenport bed. They shield sleep-ing children from light or drafts, can be placed before kitchen or kitchenette doorways, etc., etc. Ex-pensive? Not at Snellenburg's Housewares Dept., 3rd fl. For only $1.39—actually—there are good pine-framed three panel screens, 5 1/2 ft. high, for painting. Leave plain or decorate with wallpaper and shellac. I bought two! Tops.

An old American cus-tom—picnicking! Pic-nicking does things for the cross-st family, not the speak of the happi-est. A little planning and there's little work. Be sure to buy one, or even two, of the very swank, brown, woven-wood picnic baskets to be had in Snellenburg's Sporting Goods Dept. (3rd fl.) at a mere $1. Looki-worth $3! Roomy indeed, they hold more than enough for four, with compartment for a large vacuum bottle, and tapes for cutlery. I'm buying two for "big" en-tertaining. Guests like nothing better. Darned good looking bask-ets, and sturdy. Be tempted!

What could be more delightfully appropri-ate for a vacation cot-tage than a wildflower dinner set? See the one in Snellenburg's 3rd fl. China and Glass-ware Dept. Believe it or not, the price is but $6.98 for 56 pieces! Complete service for eight, and six extra cups for any breaker-upper. Thoughtful? Open stock pattern, pieces priced from 10c to $1.25. The lovely, multi-color floral de-sign is upon a rich cream ground. Tiny cream bell-flowers give a classic touch to the edges. Nice second-best set, too, for home. Some of the good new American ware.

Just about one of the trickiest, yet practical, little gadgets imagin-able is a "handy stand". To be had for $1 in Snellenburg's 1st fl. Garden Dept. Buy for self or your hostess. Use on porch, indoors, or on lawn. Does double duty. Fine for carrying beverages, bottles and glasses. It has detachable stemmed, colored ash trays (plant holders when attached) to stick in the sod beside chairs. Made of heavy wire, painted white, with two little gridded shelves and a handle for carrying. Bet you'll buy one!

Do have the right glasses for serving sum-mer beverages, be they hard or soft. Snellen-burg's China and Glass Dept. has some newest ones—tall, plain, with 4 inch numbers, of bright lipstick red, up to 8. Sufficiently thin edged, these glasses are heavily bottomed so as not to easily tip. A far cry from the medieval "tum-blers" that really upset if one sat them down. Guzzlers were expect-ed to drink "bottoms up" in those days, only sissies requiring rest between gulps. This clever num-bered set of eight makes an excel-lent hostess gift. Safe to order sight unseen. (3rd fl.)

You can now drive cool-ly into town and park your car at a special Snellenburg rate of 25c for 2 hours or under. Drive to the store's en-trance, on little cov-ered Clover St. (between Chestnut and Market and running parallel with both) and turn the car over to an attendant of the handsomest garage in the world—the new Stephen Girard. Then have all Snellenburg purchases sent to the store's Clover St. entrance. Pre-ferred set of eight makes an excel-lent hostess gift. Safe to order sight unseen. (3rd fl.)

P.S. I meant what I said about picnicking. After just one out-ing, write and tell me about it—I'd love to hear. And don't forget to tell all the Snellenburg shop folks you're friends of mine. So? Cheerio! F. C.

Josephine Dunn Will Star
In Yardley Production "Rain"

YARDLEY, July 11 — Somerset Maugham's stirring drama, "Rain," is announced by the Yardley Theatre for production the week of July 14th. Josephine Dunn stars in "Rain" in the role of Sadie Thompson, the lady with the scarlet past which has served such great names in the theatre as Jeanne Eagles, Tallulah Bankhead and Alice Brady. Nat Burns, managing director of the Yardley Theatre, last directed "Rain" at the Ohio Theatre in Cleveland; and Alice Brady, bored by a succession of comedy hits, made her return to stardom under his guidance in this production.

Josephine Dunn is a versatile star. She was featured last season in the road company of Clare Booth's "Margin for Error" and co-starred with Jackie Coogan, earlier in the season, in Aldrich and Myers' road production of "What A Life."

Also in this production of "Rain" are Wendell Corey as the soul-searing Reverend Davidson; Louise Buckley playing the frustrated Mrs. Davidson; Laurence Hayes as the helpful "Handsome;" Julian W. Gardy portraying the sloppy trader Joe Horn, in whose general store-hotel the action of the play takes place; and Kathryn Cameron as Ameena, Joe's native wife.

GRAND THEATRE

When the 20th Century-Fox production, "The Great American Broadcast," opened at the Grand Theatre last night, that sensational trio of "Tin Pan Alley," Alice Faye, John Payne, and Jack Oakie, scored another outstanding hit. Cesar Romero, the star of "Tall, Dark and Handsome," is starred with them in the hit.

"The Great American Broadcast" is the tuneful story of radio broadcasting keyed to a gay note. Skillfully reflecting the mood of the period spanned by the picture, are the catchy numbers written especially for the film by Mack Gordon and Harry Warren. You'll come out whistling "Run Little Raindrop, Run," "Long Ago Last Night," "I Take To You," "I've Got A Bone

BRISTOL THEATRE

Director Ted Reed put Jane Withers through a dramatic scene with Josephine Hutchinson for "Her First Beau," now at the Bristol Theatre with Jackie Cooper. Jane, supposedly 15 years old, made an entrance in her (according to the story) version of a glamour dress. It was cut very décolleté and was flaming red with spangles. Her hair was done up and her cheeks and lips were rouged. She wore long earrings and they sparkled.

Something new in musical westerns, "Rollin' Home To Texas," latest in the series starring singing cowboy Tex Ritter, opens today at the Bristol Theatre.

RITZ THEATRE

According to Ida Lupino, if Jack London's famous story "The Sea Wolf" had been set on land instead of on the ocean, it would pass as current history. "The Sea Wolf" is now at the Ritz.

"Edward G. Robinson," she explained, "will have been called The Dictator instead of Wolf Larsen. Just as he rules his ship with an iron hand, he could rule a kingdom. That kingdom would be his schooner, The Ghost."

BRAGG HURLS AND BATS AUTO BOYS TO 6 TO 1 VICTORY

"Loggie" Knocks Out Home Run, and Singles, to Score Four Runs

PLAYS A HARD GAME

McCue Gets Triple and Pair of Singles for Team

"Loggie" Bragg, the only colored player of the Bristol Suburban League, hurled and batted the Auto Boys to a 6-1 win over the Fleetwings team last evening on Leedom's field.

With the stick, Loggie had a home run and single to drive in four runs and score another himself. His homer came in the second frame with McCue resting on first base. With his arm, Bragg limited the aircraft workers to a quartet of hits which were well scattered.

The winners hit the ball hard, getting ten safe smacks. "Jock" McCue had a batting night by getting a triple and a pair of singles in three official trips to the plate. Bauroth had two out of two.

Foster started on the hill for the Murphymen and was shelled from the mound in the fifth when it appeared as if he could not retire the side. Sammy Kershaw finished in fine style.

Harry Bauroth and George Dougherty did good work afield for the Auto Boys team to aid them in capturing their first tilt of the second half.

ROHM & HAAS FREE WITH BATS; WIN, 16 TO 1

Lambasting three St. Ann's hurlers for a total of sixteen safe hits, the Rohm and Haas team trounced the Saints, 16-1, last evening on the Maple Beach team. The game was one-sided from the start as the chemical workers scored all their markers in the first three innings.

Salerno started on the hill for the losers and did not finish the first inning when DeRisi was called in. DeRisi lasted until the start of the third when Anthony Palumbo took a fling at pitching. When Palumbo could not get the side out in the same inning and eight runs trekked across, DeRisi was again called in to retire the side.

Stan Dick hurled for the winners and gave St. Ann's five hits. He had easy sailing and did not have to bear down. Dick also was the leading hitter of the tilt, getting a double and three singles. Manager Fred Oppman helped himself to a triple and a pair of singles.

JUROR OVERSLEEPS

ST. LOUIS — (INS) — Eugene D. Cronk, accountant, was serving on a federal court jury here recently. He failed to make his appearance after the court opened, and a bailiff telephoned his home and reported he was still asleep. When Cronk arrived in court 45 minutes late, U. S. District Judge George H. Moore fined him $15 for his tardiness. When the jurors finally were assembled, they chose Cronk as foreman of the jury.

ACTOR LOVES GARDEN

HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — Nothing is keeping Gene Raymond from his gardening these days—not even his starring role opposite his wife, Jeannette MacDonald, in "Smiling Through." Right now he's replacing the annual beds at their estate with perennials to insure all-year-round blossoms.

Navy To Ask For $4,000,000,000

Washington, July 11 — Informed legislative sources said today that the Navy will soon ask Congress for another $4,000,000,000 primarily for transport ships and speedy torpedo boats to step up the job of "keeping Atlantic sea lanes open."

These sources declared that Administration requests now in the immediate making will total around ten billion dollars—the rest of the sum to go for increased lease-lend aid to England and for speeding the merchant ship-building program.

Crops To Show Drop

Harrisburg, July 11—Field crops, except for oats and tobacco, will yield less than during 1940, the Federal State crop reporting service predicted today.

Fruit production will be under last year's crop but better than average yields are in prospect for all kinds except grapes. It was serious labor shortages have been reported but that farmers were concerned about workers for the Fall harvest.

Nazis Claim Crushing Defeat

Berlin, July 11—German authorities declared today that the High Command in the "next few days" will reveal a new and crushing defeat which has been inflicted on the main forces of the Red Army.

They said this announcement when it is made will refute in the "spectacular manner" the current outside claims that the German armies are snaggled in the Stalin line of defenses.

Predictions that the forthcoming Nazi announcement will spell the doom of serious Soviet resistance in western Russia followed the High Command's declaration regarding victorious conclusion of the Bialystok-Minsk conflict—the biggest battle in the history of the world—and its claim that more than 100,000 Red Army prisoners have been taken.

Military circles in Berlin said the fighting now hotly raging along the eastern front already has reached a point assuring that the Soviet forces will be routed from European Russia.

They added it can be assumed the Germans still are using on a vast scale their favorite pincer movement to encircle the massed divisions of crack Red army troops on the various sectors of the huge front.

Qualified sources indicated the outcome of the fighting on the Stalin line will overshadow even the first great stage of the war which found the Germans victorious in the Bialystok-Minsk pocket, Galicia and the Baltic States, where the Russians are claimed to have lost 1,000,000 men and their best equipment.
